

Finding landscape consultants operating in the Leeds district

Design of external spaces is often as important to the success of a development as the building architecture defining them. Developers and their agents are strongly advised to engage the services of qualified and experienced landscape designers to help achieve this.

Submission of a professionally designed landscape analysis and scheme will enable a planning submission to be evaluated promptly, without protracted requests for adequate specification details, prolonged negotiations or further information or even a refusal. Submission of a landscape for approval and its subsequent implementation will often be one of the conditions of planning permission.

The following sources give details of practices registered with the Landscape Institute, which is the professional institute concerned with the design of external spaces and their plantings.

- You can contact the Landscape Institute for advice on engagement of consultants and for a full list of registered practices. A shortened list is given overleaf, but check the Institute's website for the latest information
