

MUNICIPAL CEMETERY INDEXES AND REGISTERS

Burial Records: Explanatory Notes

Indexes

Entries are ordered in alphabetic sections of surname, i.e. all the A's, then all the B's etc. Within these alphabetic sections the entries are in date order.

A reference number to where the person can be found in the corresponding Register of Burials and/or Graves is given. Some, but not all, indexes give a reference number and a folio number which pin points an actual page in the Register. Sometimes an actual grave number and section is given in the index.

Register of Burials

Entries are usually in order of date of burial and/or consecutive burial number.

The name of the person buried, the date of burial, a burial number (which corresponds to the entry in the index), and a grave number and section are given. Some registers also include more interesting bits of information such as the address of the person, their age and profession, a description of the type of burial, a registration district or parish, and a place of death.

Register of Graves

Entries are usually in grave number order, although sometimes they are in order of date of burial and then roughly in order of the reference number to the entry in the Register of Burials.

The grave number and section, the names of those buried in the grave or the owner of the grave, the Register of Burials reference number, and the dates of interments are given. Some also include the ages of those buried and any monies paid for monuments or headstones.

Additional Notes

1. Not all the cemeteries have a Burial or Grave Index, in which case the only way to search the Registers is by knowing an approximate year of burial.

2. Some out size registers have had all the left hand pages filmed first and then all the right hand ones, so don't be alarmed if it seems sections of entries are missing - they will just be further along on the film. If left and right hand pages have been filmed separately there will be a note on the film telling you.
